

Real now baby

Brieve Morison

You just come out of the blue
What exactly am I supposed to do
You apologise to me for everything from the beginning
Tell me you're stoned well obviously
You weren't on the side that was winning
If I come running after you
It's 'cause you got something of mine
And we've already been through that old banal line

But you're real now baby x3
Now is your time x2

You come on to me like some express train
It's an old cliché but I'm gonna use it just the same
You appologize to me with your hands before your face
And I I feel privileged just to occupy your space
If I was god I'd appologize to you on behalf of the human race
But if I come running after you it's #cause you've got something of mine
And we've already been through that old battle line

But you're real now baby x3
Now is your time x2

When you look into my eyes I feel no fear
When I hear your breath I just know you're near
When I hear your words I just want to shut my mouth and relax
I I just want to be dear to you
I wish you peace through and through in everything you do
But if I come running after you it's because you've got something of mine
And we've already both been through a hard enough time

But you're real now baby x3
Now is your time it's got to be your time

You just come out of the blue
What exactly am I supposed to do
You just come out of the blue
What exactly do you want me to do
But if I come running after you it's 'cause you've got something of mine